

Page 2 of Packing List

Underwear

Pajamas

Socks

Comfortable pants or leggings and shirts or blouses

Whatever formal wear you want to bring

THINGS YOU PROBABLY SHOULD BRING

Small water-repellent backpack for hiking and shore excursions, but maybe also to carry items around the ship with you

Bug repellent (Apparently, mosquitos can be awful here!)

Sunscreen and sunglasses

Nightlight or small flashlight

Charging plug and cord for recharging phone and camera

Toiletries/razor/medicines/first aid (although there is a full-support medical clinic on board)

Camera, memory cards, ziploc bag to keep camera waterproof

Binoculars, good quality

ITEMS THAT MIGHT BE NICE TO HAVE

Magnetic hooks for hanging items on walls

Insulated mug for hot chocolate/hot cider/herbal tea

Power bank for recharging phone

Playing cards (although you can probably check some out onboard)

Reading book or Journal

National Park passport if you want a “stamp” from the Glacier Bay National Park

Earbuds for listening to music privately (while exercising, etc.)

DO NOT BRING THESE:

Power strips; the cruise policy is to confiscate these until you disembark

Ripped or torn jeans/shorts

Your own drinks, unless they meet cruise policies

Iron (they provide these if you need them)

Drones (cannot be used on ship; will be locked up to make sure you don't)

Blow-dryer (these are provided in the room with a low wattage; our high-wattage blow dryers will blow fuses).

And obviously weapons, fireworks, etc.